The Australian National University Strategic Plan 2017-2021 has, at its core, The Need for Change. One of the five areas identified as a Need for Change is Delivering on our Unique National Responsibilities-Our responsibility to Indigenous Australia.

The Australian National University Reconciliation Action Plan January 2018-December 2019 states that ‘The University’s vision for reconciliation is to be a place that facilitates learning that respects cultures and diversity: a place where Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and non-Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people come together to engage with their chosen discipline, contextualised by an understanding of our shared history. ANU will make an important contribution to reconciliation by furthering learning, research, services and public knowledge in relation to Indigenous issues.

ANU will make a significant contribution to improving higher-education and employment outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and enable them to realise their potential and aspirations. Our partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples will provide the University with the opportunity to listen and learn about their past, their current circumstances and their vision for the future. ANU is where their cultures are both respected and celebrated.’

The College of Business and Economics acknowledges Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities as the traditional custodians of this land. Our vision is for an Australia that provides equal opportunities for all, while recognising and respecting the special place, culture and contribution of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the first Australians. The College is committed to ‘closing the gap’ that exists for Indigenous people and will work towards this goal in all areas of our operations; research, education, employment, outreach and infrastructure.
